improvement and refinement of this study in an attempt to elicit greater statistical yields. This said, there are many different directions this study can be taken for replication and improvement. Overall, not only would further investigating the future directions lead to an expansion of research, but it would holistically benefit the field.

- Research Project: The Achievement of Flow During Sports Betting: A Study Through the Lens of Second-Screen Viewing, This Study is aimed at opening the door into flow research within the realm of sports betting. Through the acquisition of past literature, and the creation of a strong methodology, the purpose of this study is to promote awareness, as well as enlighten both gamblers and non-gamblers alike to the causes of flow and its psychological and physical effects on an individual. Carried out through five detailed in-person interviews, this study will seek to provide a substantial framework for the successful execution of the aforementioned research.
